The piece really is an adaptation of James Fenimore Cooper's "A Patriot Spy," and its managers expect that it will prove most valuable as a theatrical property.

No fewer than three headliners are advertised to make their bows on Monday afternoon at the Grand. The first of these is Madame Herrmann, the widow of the late Herrman, "the great," and herself a nate tierrman, the great, and herself a magician of ability. Lillian Burkhart, who has been called "the Julia Marlowe of the vaudevilles," is the second on the list, and much is expected of her new playlet, "A Deal on 'Change." Edna Bassett Marshall, who made a strong impression here some menths ago, also is announced. Again Projected.

A. E. Randle, formerly president of the Capital Railway Company, is agitating a proposition to construct the Washington and Marlboro Railroad, which was projected several years ago. The route authorized by Congress in 1895 provided that the road should enter the District along the Sultland Road, cross the Eastern Branch by a bridge to be built by the company, and proceed thence to Fifteenth Street and proceed thence to Fifteenth Street and Florida Avenue. It is proposed to make the line a feeder to the Capital Traction system.

Much-doubt prevails whether the charter for this line has not expired. When it was granted the Chesapeake Beach line had not been built and the routes proposed are parellel from end to end. The charter also limited to two years the complete con-struction of the line, which period has ex-

A DECISION NEXT WEEK

Railway Safety Appliance Case to Be Definitely Settled.

Extension of Time for a Few Month Will Probably Be Granted-Trainmen Object to Waiting Longer for the Improvements-Witnesses for and Against the Proposed Change.

It was learned today that a decision will be reached early next week by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the petition of the various railroads for an extension of time of one year in which to apply safety devices to all their rolling stock, While it is not believed by the petitioners that a full year will be allowed in which to complete the improvements required, it is thought that from four to six mouths will be granted. In the afternoon session yesterday, Mr. E. E. Clark, of the Brotherhood of Rail-way Conductors, who represented the several railroad labor organizations, presented an argument from the employes' stands point, which showed that the trainmen are not favorable to the extension of time of one year, but that in view of the necessities of traffic, they are willing to expose themselves under the present conditions for some shorter period.

The law requiring safety

tions for some shorter period.

The law requiring safety appliances, was enacted in 1893, and in 1897, 219 less men were killed, and 4,934 less men injured from coupling and uncoupling cars alone, than in 1893.

Mr. Cowen, who represented eighty-eight railroads before the Commission, stated that these roads had spent more than $40,000,000 during the past two years in applying the safety devices required by law.

Mr. Clark pointed out that the millions naid by the employes for the benefit of

Mr. Clark pointed out that the millions paid by the employes for the benefit of injured fellow-workmen and their families would never be reimbursed.

He stated that all the railway employes are anxious that the patent couplers be applied at once, although it means to them a reduction of their forces.
